Recap from Convey '24!

We were honored to sponsor the National Grain and Feed Association and Grain Elevator and Processing Society \(GEAPS\) Convey Conference last week. It was important to share our experience with serious Injury and fatalities in the workplace. The presentation reflected back to the loss of a coworker who was killed in a grain engulfment in 2006 and how our company shifted focus away from traditional safety efforts to preventing serious injuries and fatalities. We hope you were able to attend and the information makes a difference for your operation. We'd love your feedback.

Is It Safe?

No Way! Bulk bags can collapse causing serious injury and even death. When moving and storing bulk bags always:

- Avoid double and triple stacking bulk-bags when possible.
- Cross stack or interlock the bags with the second layer straddling the space between the first layer.
- Place a pallet or piece of plywood between bags when stacking bags on top of one another.
- Stack bags as straight as possible so that they do not lean or shift.
- Maintain plenty of space between stacked bags and doors, walkways, or high traffic areas in case the bags shift or collapse.
- Keep pedestrians away from bulk bag storage areas.
